

Americans' Perceptions About Children's Health Insurance

Key findings from nation-wide polls

The vast majority of Americans consider covering all children a national priority. Additionally, most Americans are willing to make financial sacrifices to meet that goal. What follows is a summary of key findings from several recent nationwide polls that reveal Americans' attitudes about the growing children's health crisis.

Americans believe that ALL children should have health insurance.

- 9 out of 10 Americans support the notion that every child in America has a right to basic healthcare.
- 67% of Americans believe the government is doing too little to provide health care to uninsured children.²

Americans believe the government should take action to ensure that all children have health insurance.

- More than 7 out of 10 Americans believe that the government should provide a national health insurance program for children, even if this would require higher taxes.³
- More than 7 in 10 Americans believe that "the federal government should take financial responsibility to cover uninsured children."

Americans want Congress to Support State Efforts to Cover Uninsured Children

- 8 in 10 Americans support expanding a government program to provide health insurance to some middle-class, uninsured children, and more than 7 in 10 of these would be willing to pay more taxes to fund such an expansion.⁵
- 72% of Americans support increasing federal spending on children's health insurance by 35 billion over the next five years. 6
- 65% of Americans support increased funding for the program, even after hearing opponents' argument that expansion would encourage some families who have private health insurance to drop it in favor of government-funded coverage, and that expansion will cover some children in middle-class families.²
- Support for the CHIP bill includes majorities across all party lines, including:
 - o 81% of Democrats
 - o 69% of Independents
 - o 61% of Republicans⁵
- More than a third of voters said that if their Member of Congress were opposed to expansion of SCHIP, they would be more likely to vote against them in the next election.²
- 67% say they disapprove of President Bush's decision to veto legislation passed by Congress to expand CHIP, and 64% believe that Congress should vote to overturn the veto.²

Sources:

¹ First Focus National Survey (July 2007)

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-srv/politics/polls/postpoll_100107.html

² NPR/Harvard School of Public Health/Kaiser Family Foundation "Public Views on SCHIP Reauthorization" (October 2007) http://www.kff.org/kaiserpolls/upload/7703.pdf

CNN National Poll (May 2007)

⁴ Catholic Health Association national public opinion survey (June 2007) http://ccf.georgetown.edu/pdfs/0723survey.pdf

⁵ CBS News Poll (October, 2007)

⁶ABC News/ Washington Post Poll (September 2007)